MADAME D'ARBLAY.

THE DIARY AND LETTERS OF FRANCES BUNN (Madame D'Arblay), revised and edited by Sarah Chauncy of Worcester. Illustrated. 2 vols. cloth extra, $4.

"My Diary" and "Madame D'Arblay" for the English reader. The work was first written by a woman that lived, deserved, and died for her art.

"The Diary is the least to the fiction by which her celebrity was won than to a work which only saw the light after her death, the Diary and Letters, now, however, are the most interesting and important documents. These volumes are unknown to me, and I forward copies of them to Caiman Levy, at 39 Rue Astier, Paris.... Professor Masson, is engaged in the preparation of a new edition of the Diary, and I hope to have it ready in a few months."—Life of Millet. The forthcoming volume of the "Encyclopædia Britannica" will extend the work from "Go," to "H." Fardon writes on article on "Harold," Canon Rawlinson on the one on "Herodotus," and S. R. Gardner on "Thompson."
